

The Pomegranate, the Apple- Tree and the Bramble

Aesop's Fables

Greek

Advanced
1 min read

A Pomegranate and an Apple-tree were disputing about the quality of their fruits, and each claimed that its own was the better of the two. High words passed between them, and a violent quarrel was imminent, when a Bramble impudently poked its head out of a neighbouring hedge and said, "There, that's enough, my friends; don't let us quarrel."

Read more fairy tales on Fairytales.com